LETTER FROM JUDGE WALLACE. He Declines to Allow His Name to be Presented for Governor.

Union C. H., S. C. Editor Intelligencer: I have recently seen an editorial article in the INTELLI-GENORE in which you express a preference for me for the nomination for Governor. I desire to thank you for the | you? honor you do me, and for the terms in your preference is expressed. Having fully considered the matter, and having reached a determinate conclusion, I feel it to be due to my friends that I should at once declare that, for reasons which it cannot interest the public to know, I cannot allow my name to be presented to the Convention for the nomi-

Very respectfully, your obedient ser-ant, W. H. WALLACE.

The municipal election in Columbia last week resulted in a complete "walk over the track" for the Democratic nominces. Columbia has set a worthy example to the other portions of South Carolina. They made good nominations and stuck to them solidly. That is the sure way to achieve success.

The card of Judge Wallace, which we publish elsawhere, conveys the unwelcome information that he cannot consent to accept the nomination for Governor in the coming canvass, and therefore leaves the contest where it stood before he was suggested. A great many of our readers will regret this, for he was un-doubtedly the favorite of a large majority of them for Governor. Judge Wallace, however, occupies an important position which is more congenial to his taste and equally as advantageous to the State, and it is not unreasonable for bim to prefer to retain it. Circumstances may yet arise which will necessitate his nomination in the interests of that enthusiasm and concord which is necessary to save

A proper appreciation of the character of the Union and of the Confederate soldier by each other is bound to inspire respect and confidence between them, and it was in pursuance of this belief that we published the tribute to Colonel Dalley anatropidity and courage as contained in the article referred to. When he prepared the statement of his recollection of the event referred to, the INTERACTIONS will be pleased to publish it cles, if we are get hold of it. It is a hear reign when the men who were the sine and those who were the grey one assess together and discuss the events of an unfortance war, in which they were copared on opposite sides, without irritation and concerned anger, and the temper of their correspondence is more than creditable to Gen. CONDEMNED TO DIE. It is a rotorious fact that although many murdors occurred during Republican ascendancy in South Carolina in which white men killed colored people, yet no white man was ever executed for such a crime under their administration of the government by them, and they have repeatedly esserted that none would ever occur under a Democratic administration. Since we obtained the government these killings have almost entirely stopped, and the following report of a case terminated at the late Spartanburg Court, taken from the Carolina Spartan, partially administered by our Courts: Thomas White, a white man, several weeks ago, on the streets of Spartanburg, while intoxicated, by some strange freak, shot and killed Pet Williams, a negro, without representation. without provocation. The strange thing is that he did this without knowing Hawhim. It may never be known what was the secret spring in his mind that made him do this deed.

Friday afternoon the prisoner was brought into Court and placed in the dock. A dense crowd packed the court-room at the time. Judge Wallace, feeling the awful solemnity of the occasion, said:

"Thomas, White, stand up. Have you anything to say why the sentence of death should not be pronounced on you?"

For the first time during the whole trial the prisoner showed some agitation of mind. His voice was a little quivering, and he said: "I can only say that I am clear of the charges against me. I am not guilty of them. I am innocent of it. In my conscience before God I don't feel that I done this deed. I don't think it right before God to put me to death for what I did not do." These were about his words, uttered with not so were about his words, uttered with not so much connection as here expressed.

Judgo Wallace then said about as follows:

"Unfostunately for you, Thos. White, a jury of your countrymen have declar dyou guilty, and it is my painful duty to declare the judgment of the law. I do not punish you, and the jury does not punish you, and the jury does not punish you. The jury have found, after careful investigation, that you killed Pet Hawkins. On that record the duty, painful as it is, devolves upon me to pronounce the sentence of the law. I cannot find it in my heart to add one word to the keen distress you feel. All men must die; but when you, a young man, full of life, just in the vigor of manhood, come to die a felon's death, it must penetrate you with a degree of distress which cannot be expressed in words. It must occur to you, as it must to every man, occur to you, as it must to every man, that if you had not had a pistol in your

"If you had not had a pistol in your pocket, and been on that fatal afternoon dinking liquor to excess. Pet Hawkins would not have been killed, and you would not have been killed, and you would not have been killed, and your approaching death are traceable to the common practice of drinking liquor to excess, which practice proved as fatal as if you had administered strychnine to Pet Hawkins and then taken it yourself. Examples are of such frequent occurrence in South Carolina, where the free use of whisky, joined with the practice of carrying concealed weapons, brings many men to danger and death, that, it seems to me, all good men ought to endeavor to concentrate public opinion so as to check these two evil practices. Thomas White, I regret that it is my duty to give it as my opinion that you will be obliged to die. It seems that you have nothing to do but to make your peace with that God whose laws you have violated. Let me, who would do everything in tenderness, exhort you to save yourself from a more dreadful punishment than the law can inflict. I will not protract this fearful seene. The sentence of the law is that you be taken from the place where you now are back to the jail, and there kept in close confinement until Friday, the 23rd day of April next, and that, on that day, you be taken from tho jail to the place of private execution, and there be-of a reader of your paper, I am in receipt of a number thereof which contained a letter from your Washington correspondent of January 14th, entitled "Two Stories of Brave Men." Allow me to thank you for the fair and impartial manner with which you have treated the correspondence of Gen. Hagood and myself. As might be expected, viewing Gen. Hagood's command and the condition of it from my standpoint at the time I received the flag from the Ensign of one of the Confederate Regiments, I differ with the General as to what was said and done by each of us at the time I was shot. My knov edge of the facts and circumstances make my side of the case much more favorable to myself than any statement I have ever yet seen of the occurrence, yet I am very thankful to Gen. Hagood for the aid he has given me in the matter of my spplication for pension. It is my intention before long, and as soon as I can get relieved from some professional services now on my hands, to give Gen. Hagood a detailed account of the affair, as the same appeared to us, as well as the orders received by myself to go to that part of the line threatened by Hagood's command.

I am, very respectfully, yours, D. B. DAILEY.

A BLOODY DAY IN EDGEFIELD. A Municipal Election Causes a Fatal Af-fray-Pistols and Whiskey Connected

Augusta Chronicle and Constitutionalist.

Yesterday afternoon the report reached Augusta that another bloody vendetta had occurred in Edgefield, whereby one person was even then in a dying condiporson was even then in a dying condition, and two others dang cousty wounded. From mouth to mouth the rumor sped, until the whole town was aghast at the repetition of a fatal affair of only eighteen months ago. Telegraph and newspaper offices were besieged for news from the scene of bloodshed, and perhaps of death, and the evening train of the Columbia Road was boarded by several natives of Edgefield, now residents of Augusta, anxious and apprehensive over the extent of the trouble. The first dispatch was brief, but fearfully suggestive. It was this:

"Another shooting scrape occurred here this morning, about the election of Town Council, which came off to-day. Julian Bland and Dr. W. E. Bland, A. A. Clisby and A. A. Glover were the parties en-and A. A. Glover were the parties engaged. Dr. Bland was shot in the abdogaged. Dr. Bland was shot in the abdomen—considered mortal. A. A. Clisby was shot through the body and received a wound on the head from the blow of a pistol—considered dangerous. A. A. Glover is shot twice in the thigh—not dangerous. Dr. Campbell, of your city has been telegraphed for, and will come up to-night."

Excitement culminated in the evening late, when it was announced here that Dr. Wallace Bland was dead.

What effect his nomination would have upon the several Congressicnal Districts I am not prepared at present to say. The Democracy of our State would not think of bolting the nomination, but we should be so indifferent, if the momination of Mr. Tilden was presented for our support, that I should say the vote of the State would be less than it was for Mr. Greeley in 1872. While there is no doubt but what the party would give him its support, it would do it grudgingly, as it were under protest, and go through the campaign in a heartless manner. That is my honest conviction. You must remeraber we had a very hard time four years ago when all the enthusiasm of the Democracy of the State was aroused. What would it be if we had to carry a dead weight next fall. As for the result in the Congressional Districts, I do not think there would be any break in the delegation. Our local interests are more centered in election of Congressmen, and, I believe, we would elect the five members the State is entitled to. Bayard, Lamar, Garland, Kernan and others spoke against the present consideration of the Kell'ag case; while Saulabury, Hill, Vance and Jones again insisted that it ought to be brought before the Senate for action without delay. The arguments pro and con were much the same as those of yesterday and the day before, except that even more determination was shown today by the advocates of immediate action. It was also openly suggested that a proposition to unseat heliogs and saat Spofford could not be adopted, because there were Democratic Yenators who would vote agalast it. Hill said: "Very well, let them vote against it. The committee had done its duty, and it now remained for the Senate to perform its duty. No matter what the vote might be, he insisted upon the case being disposed of, and in regard to its possible effect upon the Presidential election, he said that it ought not to deter the Senate from disposing of the case." Finally the resolution was adopted by a majority of three, providing that the Geneva award bill shall be taken up first, and shall be considered from day to day until disposed of; and that then the Chairman of the Elections Committee may call up Kellogg unless, in the meantime, the Democratic caucus shall decide otherwise.

The cauens this morning was not fully attended, and it was understood that another shall be held before the fanal disposition of the Geneva award bill, to pass finally upon the question of the consideration of the Kellogg case. This position of the Geneva award bill, to pass, finally upon the question of the consideration of the Kellogg case. This was a sort of compromise and it was constanted to in the hope of bringing about a better feeling on the question than now exists. It is the understanding that the final decision shall be made by a full vote of all the Democratic Senators if it can be obtained.
